Autumn means lots of things, but typical things include Falling Leaves, and playing Conkers in the playground. At the beginning of Autumn (some time in September, usually) we celebrate Harvest Festival to say thank you for the crops. On 31st October some people celebrate Halloween, and on 1st November it's All Saints Day. Remember, remember the 5th of November when Guy Fawkes plotted to blow up parliament? We celebrate this now with a Bonfire and Fireworks. Remembrance Day (also known as Armistice Day) is on the 11th of the month when we remember those who have died at war. Many people wear a Poppy at this time to show that they have remembered these people and their families. On the third Thursday in November the Americans celebrate Thanksgiving. This is a special day to remember the first people to live in America. Did you know that the Americans call this season the "Fall"? Then it's December and the beginning of Advent, and another new season begins.
